FORWARD-LOOKING STATEMENTS

Certain statements contained in the report constitute forward-looking statements. Forward-looking statements are generally identified by terms such as "anticipate", "believe", "estimate", "expect", "plan", "future", "intend", "may", "will", "should", "predicts", "potential", "continue", and similar expressions. Forward-looking statements reflect current views of the Company and its management with respect to future events and are subject to risks, uncertainties and assumptions, both known and unknown. Many factors could cause the actual results, performance or achievements of the Company to be materially different from those referred to in any forward-looking statements. These factors include, but are not limited to, fluctuations in the prices of metals and minerals, changes in general economic conditions, discovery of unanticipated geological conditions in the Company's properties, or changes in the investment preferences and strategies of investors and potential investors in the Company's securities. Should one or more of the risks or uncertainties materialize, or should assumptions underlying the forward-looking statements prove incorrect, actual results may vary materially from those described in any forward-looking statements. Undue reliance should not be placed on any forward-looking statements. The Company does not undertake any obligation to update these forward-looking statements, except as required by applicable securities laws.

The business of the Company is the exploration and development of mineral properties, which is a business of high inherent risk. Most exploration programs fail to locate a body of commercial ore. All exploration and mining programs face a risk of unknown and unanticipated geological conditions, and promising indications from early results may not be borne out in further exploration work. Few properties which are explored are ever developed into producing mines. A mineral exploration program often requires substantial cash investment, which can be lost in its entirety if it does not result in the discovery of a commercial ore body. Mineral exploration involves risks which even a combination of careful evaluation, experience, and knowledge cannot eliminate.

RESULTS OF OPERATIONS

Analysis of income statement items

Net loss for the three month period ended October 31, 2007 was $172,903, compared to $44,901 for the prior year three month period. The Company does not generate revenue from operations, and has no revenues other than interest earned on the Company's balances of cash and cash equivalents. Accordingly, the increase of the Company's net loss for the three month period ended October 31, 2007 was due to increased expenses. The principal reasons for the increased expenses were as follows:

- Professional fees expenses increased from $nil to $32,859, principally as a result of increased legal and accounting costs to maintain regulatory compliance and statutory filings.
- Shareholder communication expenses increased from $4,109 to $32,774, principally as a result of increased costs incurred in distributing information about the Company through web-based information services.
- Office and rental services increased from $4,510 to $10,984. The increase resulted from the increased level of activity within the Company, requiring additional office premises.
- Stock compensation expense increased from $nil to $51,112, principally as a result of incentive stock option grants during the three month period and use of the fair-value-based method for calculating the stock compensation expense.
- Wages and benefits and management fees increased in total from $nil to $31,380, principally as a result of additional personnel being hired because of the Company's increased level of activity.
